Leading Transformation in Learning and Teaching (LTLT)

is the leadership programme to develop, enhance or transform learning and teaching programmes and courses in higher education (HE).

LTLT takes a holistic approach to curriculum development focusing on not just the processes by which programmes are developed but the skills, insights and expertise needed to lead transformation in order to meet new demands and expectations.

Participants will have the opportunity to examine new approaches, share best practice and collaborate with HE colleagues from across the sector. They will also develop solutions by engaging with a live case study with a team from Imperial College London and will apply their learning through the use of a specially designed toolkit.

LTLT is the leadership programme to transform learning and teaching programmes and processes.

How it works
LTLT offers participants a high level of flexibility and the full programme comprises three modules:

• Module one: Getting started, Wednesday 12 and Thursday 13 November 2014
• Module two: Getting going, Tuesday 9 December 2014
• Module three: Going forward, Thursday 29 January 2015

There will also be two follow-up online action-learning sets between February and April 2015.

The kinds of change challenges which may be tackled include: employability; internationalisation; digital literacy and moving from modularisation to different approaches.

How much does it cost?
The full programme costs £1995 for delegates from institutions which are either subscribers of the HEA or members of the LFHE (£2495 for non-subscribers). Costs for attendance on Module one or Modules one and two are also available.

Who should apply?
LTLT is open to anyone with an interest in curriculum design and the transformation of learning and teaching in their institutions, faculties and departments. It is of particular value to course directors, programme leaders, assistant heads of department, taught course directors, departmental directors of teaching and associate deans (learning and teaching). Applications for the next LTLT cohort, starting in November 2014, are open now.

More information about the programme and how to apply can be found on the HEA website at www.heacademy.ac.uk/LTLT

Closing date for applications is 15 September 2014, for enquiries contact 01904 717500 and speak to the Change team or email change@heacademy.ac.uk
